My theme is inspired by maximalist, baroque styled art, although conceptualised through a more modern eye. I have taken influence from a platter called 'Apollo and the Muses' found in the Wallace collection. I have created my own scene inspired by this and my fathers life in the navy. My collection will consist of outfits inspired by my scene to fit the characters: the Barmaid, the Sailor and the Band.

A SAILOR'S NIGHT

THE SCENE

A Sailors Night the story of a lonely sailor, hasn't been home for months, docking at another foreign port. After his usual routine of drinking until the bar shuts the sailor finds himself at the last open bar, an ancient derelict building, a place that looks like it has been abandoned for years, a place that a sober mind would never consider entering. He stumbles through the unhinged door to see only one working light with a barmaid waiting beneath it. She greets him with a smile, suddenly the bar fills with light, a band begins to play and art covers the walls. The drunken sailor feels like he is dreaming, like his is starring in an old romantic play, he can't help but continually recite old romantic poems, surprised by the barmaid. Lost in his lust the band narrates the night through song as the sailor no longer has control of himself and what is the next unfold in third person, until he slowly hits sobriety.

THE SAILOR

OUR MASCOT

Inspired by the poets who serve Apollo, the sailor is a drunk who believes he is a player and has the same routine of getting drunk and chasing women wherever he docks.

BRYN LIFAN

Inspired by the god Apollo, the barmaid seems to have this hypnotising effect on all that pass through, plays those who do as a game and gets pleasure out of feeding the one night lovers ego's.

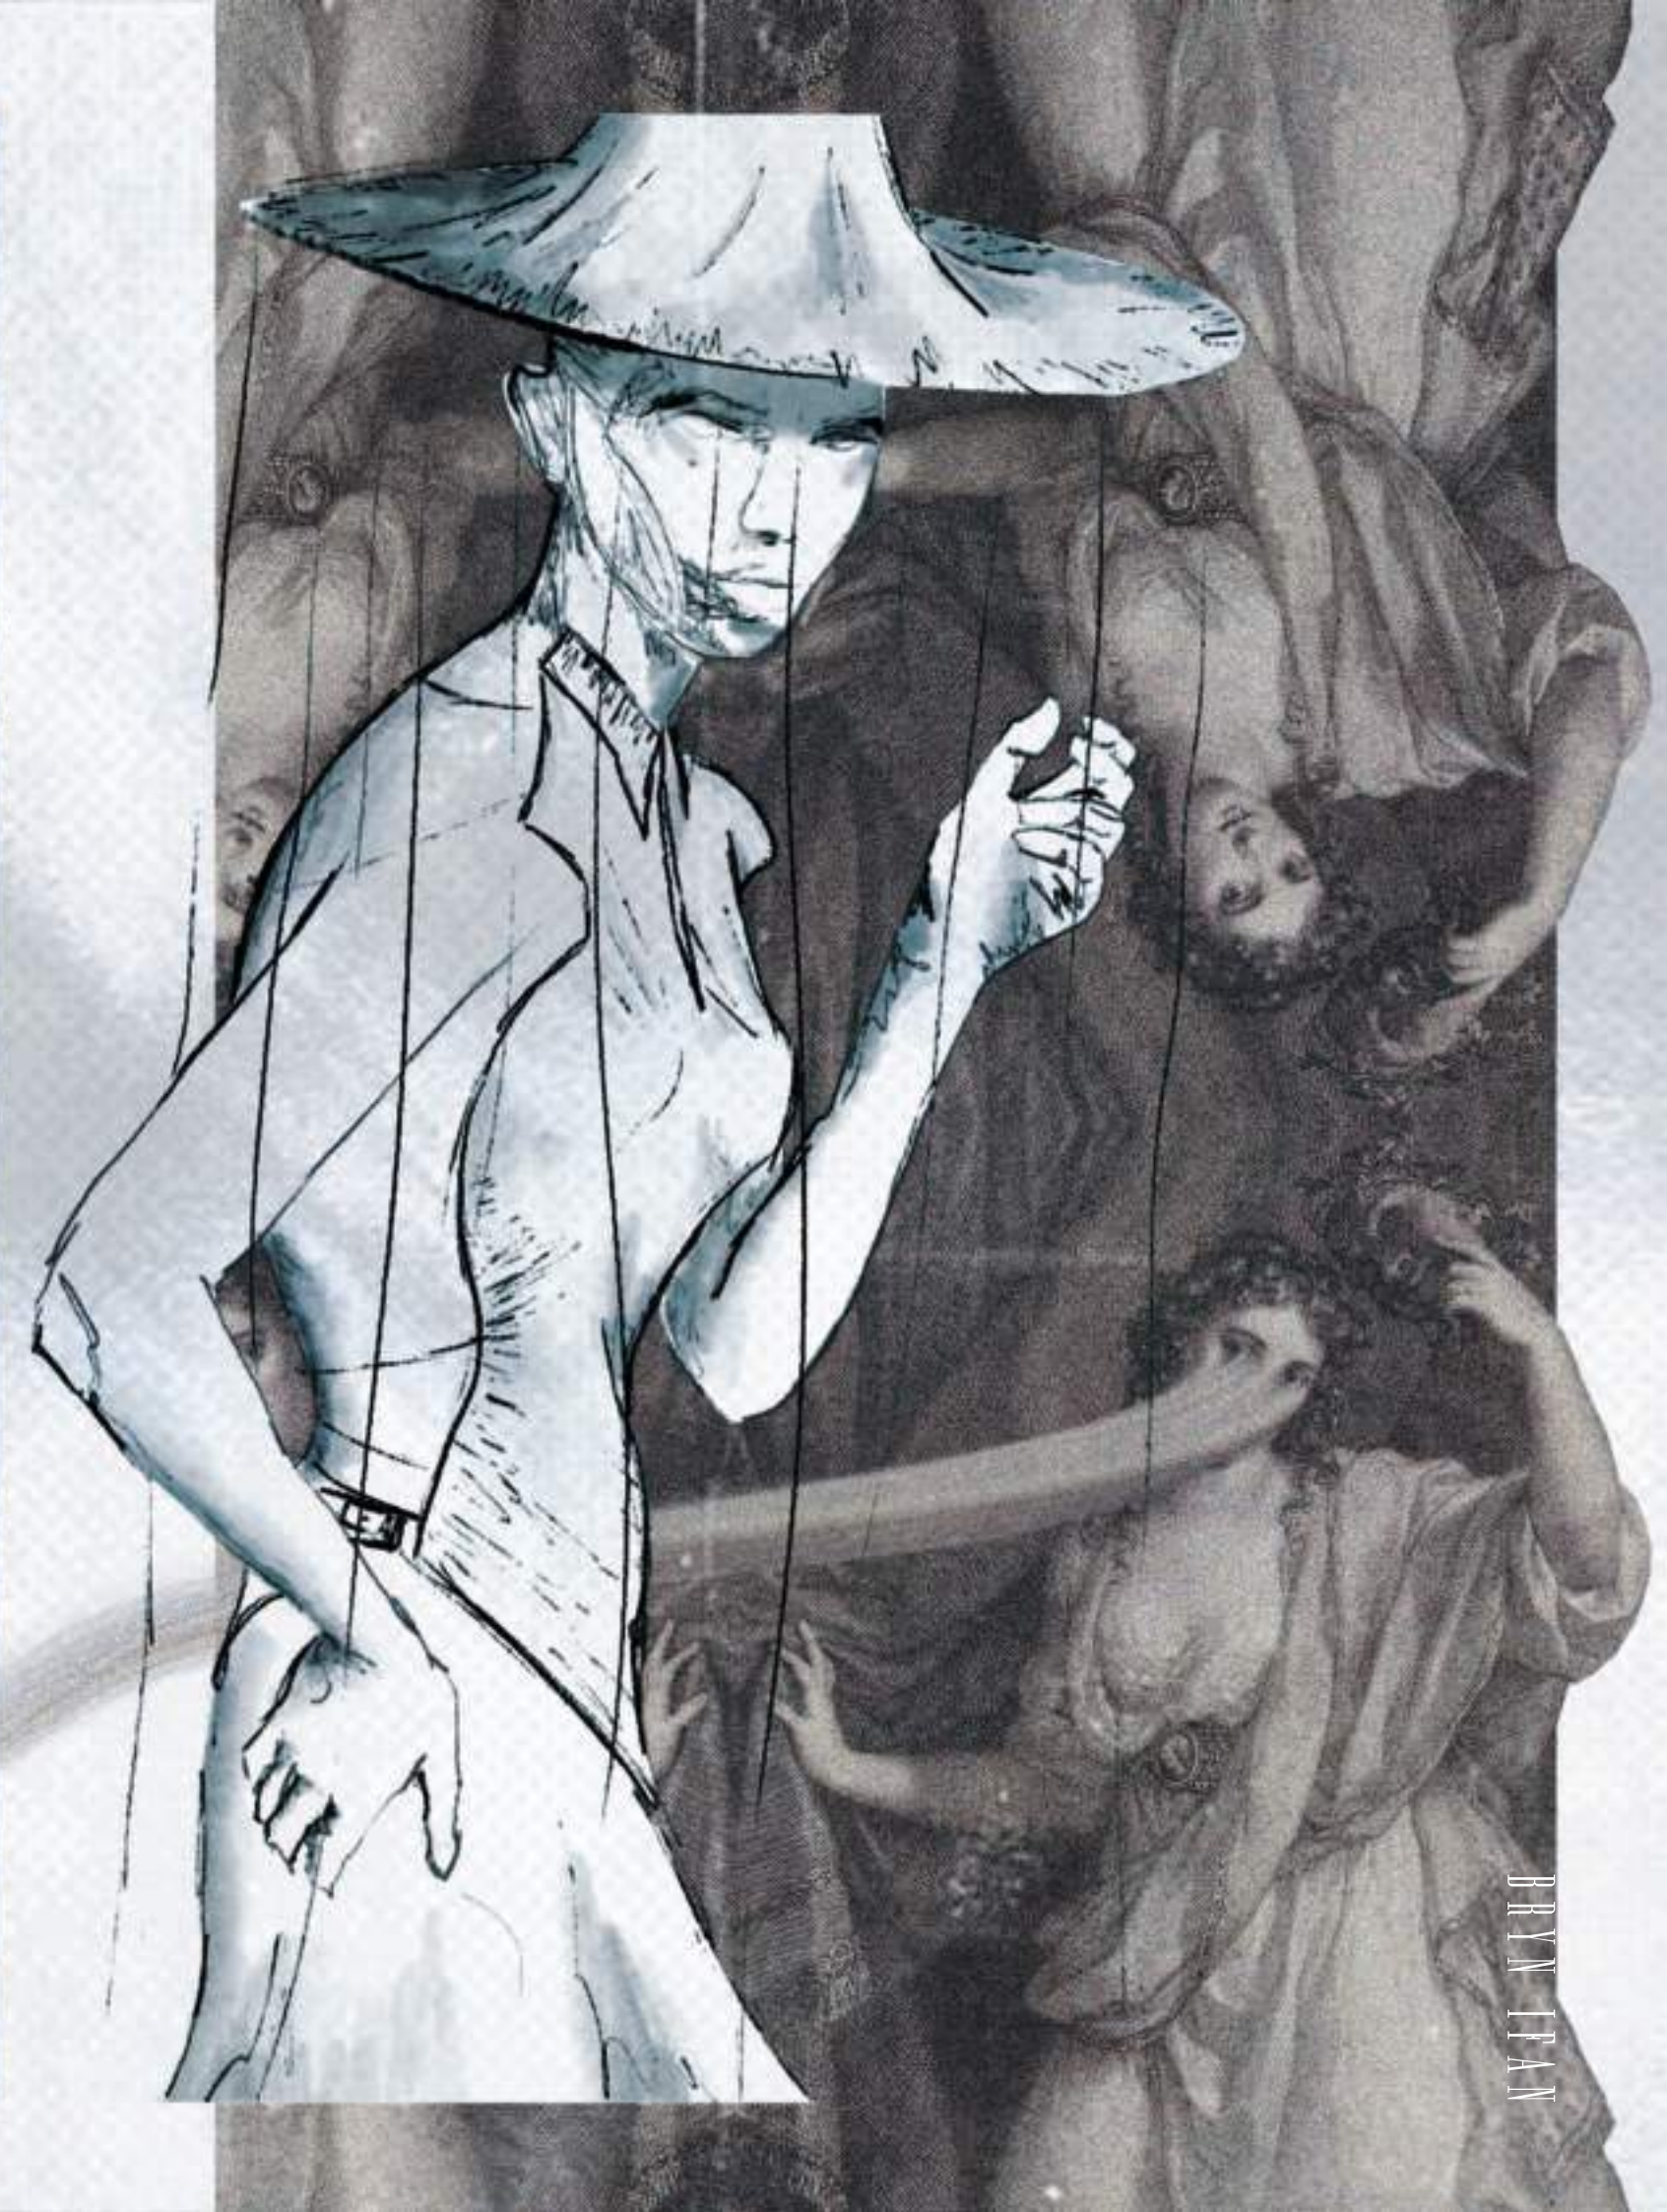

BARMAID THAT

THE PIANIST

Inspired by the Muses of Apollo, the band is a manifestation of the sailor. They're vain, glamorous, and somewhat comedic, and seem to puppet the sailor through the night.
